Step 5: Nominating beneficiaries

Nominating beneficiaries is an important decision to make. You can choose one of the three different types of nominations available to you below. We recommend you seek legal and tax advice if you are not sure what is appropriate in your circumstances.

Preferred beneficiaries

Select the person(s) who you would prefer to receive your pension in the event of your death. You can only nominate a person that meets the definition of a ‘dependent’ under superannuation law. This includes your spouse, defacto partner, children, a person with whom you have an interdependency relationship, or a person who is financially dependent upon you. You can also nominate your legal personal representative(s).

These nominations are non-binding and will only be used by Australian Ethical Super as a guide.

Name	Relationship	Percentage
<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/> %
<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/> %
<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/> %
Total		100%

Binding death benefit

If you would like your nominated beneficiaries to be binding on Australian Ethical Super, then complete the Binding Death Benefit Nomination Form, which is available on our website.

Your nominations will be binding provided it meets the legal requirements and as outlined in the Binding Death Benefit Nomination form. We recommend you seek legal and tax advice if you are not sure what is appropriate in your circumstances.

Reversionary beneficiary

You can nominate one person to be a reversionary beneficiary. This can include your spouse, defacto partner, children, a person with whom you have an interdependency relationship, or a person who is financially dependent upon you.

A reversionary beneficiary is someone to whom the pension will continue to be paid via regular payments (pension) following your death.
