Total returns are calculated using the sell (exit) price, net of management fees and gross of tax as if distributions of income have been reinvested at the actual distribution reinvestment price. The actual returns received by an investor will depend on the timing, buy and exit prices of individual transactions. Return of capital and the performance of your investment in the fund are not guaranteed. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Figures showing a period of less than one year have not been adjusted to show an annual total return. Figures for periods of greater than one year are on a per annum compound basis. The current benchmark may not have been the benchmark over all periods shown in the above chart and tables. The calculation of the benchmark performance links the performance of previous benchmarks and the current benchmark over the relevant time periods.

Commentary

Global markets had a strong final quarter for 2022 after a volatile nine months, with the MSCI World index ex Australia rising 7.5% and the S&P ASX 300 rising 9.1%. Despite inflation remaining elevated, there were indications that prices could stabilize, as natural gas prices fell from a high of €340/MWh in August to pre-Ukraine levels near €70 by the end of the year. The US bond yield decreased dropping from 4.23% in October to 3.88% by the end of the year. The Australian bond market was more volatile, falling from 4.2% in October to 3.29% in December before finishing the year at 4.05%.

The High Growth Fund returned 3.9% (Wholesale: 4.1%) for the quarter, underperforming its SAA weighted benchmark which returned 6.2%. The domestic equities portfolio was the largest contributor to absolute performance, returning 4.9%, but also the largest detractor to relative performance as it underperformed its S&P/ASX 300 benchmark which returned 9.4%. The Financials sector drove much of the portfolio's absolute performance, with companies like banks and insurers benefiting from the rising rate environment. The Materials sector was the largest detractor to relative performance due to an underweight position in the sector and a retraction in lithium stocks.

The International Equities portfolio returned 3.7%, underperforming its MSCI World ex AU index which returned 3.9%. Similar to the domestic equities portfolio, the Financials sector drove absolute performance. The lack of exposure to the Energy sector, which benefited from elevated commodity prices, was the largest detractor to relative performance.
